

In Left vs. Right politics, where are Libertarians?

Typical Left positions

- Government-regulated economy
- UN military adventures
- War on poverty, homelessness
- Individual gun ownership banned
- Taxpayer-funded government charities
- Special treatment for select minorities

Typical Libertarian positions

- Personal freedom
- Non-interventionist foreign policy
- Tolerance of others' peaceful choices
- Civil liberties and privacy rights
- Separation of church and state
- Ending corporate welfare

Sensible Center

Typical Right positions

- Economic freedom
- Robust national defense
- Respect for others' property rights
- Individual right to keep and bear arms
- Giving generously to help those in need
- Ending entitlement programs
- Government-regulated morality
- US military adventures
- War on sex, drugs, and rock 'n roll
- Individual privacy rights banned
- Taxpayer-funded faith-based charities
- Special treatment for select corporations

Politicians on the left and right believe government should control large parts of your life. Libertarians put the freedom and responsibility for your life in your hands.

On every issue ask, "Who decides? Me or a politician?" If you believe you should be free to make choices about your life, your family, and your business, you are a libertarian. Government's role is to keep us secure from assault, theft, and fraud. Otherwise, it should keep out of your life and your wallet.

Help your community move in the direction of liberty. Visit www.LPillinois.org or call (800) 735-1776.